Postmaster General Wanamaker intended to spend yesterday in Washington, but a call from some Philadelphia friends to attend a Sunday school service in the suburbs of the friendly city called him hence. It was the last Sunday the Wanamaker family will spend in Washington this season, as they go this week to their home near Philadelphia.

SUBURBAN STREET RAILWAYS. The Use of Public Roadways-A Discussion in the Senate.

The Senate Saturday decided that when a street railway desires to spread itself into the suburbs it shall not do so along the public highways. The matter came up on Senator Hale's motion to reconsider the bill authorizing the construction of branch road from the main Brightwood road to Takoma Park. The amendment provides that none of the tracks of this branch road shall be within the limits of any street, road or high-entirely unreasonable.

Senator Hale said that the president of the road had called upon him and asked him what was his purpose in moving to reconsider; that official had assented to the amendment offered. Senator Harris made further objection and dition of affairs existed. Whenever an attempt was made to limit or restrict a railroad company in any of its plans, and the company was itself willing, the Senate District committee insisted that there should be no limitations and assumes a guardianship of these corporations. He instanced the Tenleytown Railroad Company and its tracks as an example of careless legislation. Travel on that road at

Senator Harris said he thought the route and such things could be left in the hands of the District Commissioners.

Senator Hale was somewhat warm by that time. He said the Senator from Tennessee more rights than it wanted. He (Senator Hale) was not satisfied to leave the public rights to be adjudicated by the District Com-missioners. That was not imputation either. apt to be overridden.

Senator Harris said that he had committed the grave error of supposing that the Commissioners and the District committee knew as much about local mat-ters as even the Senator from Maine. That gentleman (Mr. Hale) had been taking charge of about every bill concerning street railroads that had come up this session. Personally Senator Harris declared he was not interested and did not, in fact, know an officer

Senator Hale asked Senator Harris whether or not the company had been asked by the committee to lay its tracks outside the high-way, and Senator Harris responded by saying that he had not seen any one connected with the company, although he was the subcommittee in charge of the bill. CRITICISING THE COMMITTEE.

Then Senator Hale asked if it was possible that a bill had been considered by both subcommittee and full committee on the District and had been reported without even a hearing Senator Hale said that the District committee had given its case away. The amendment was agreed to and the bill the whole District, practically, with the expansion that is going on now. With the manifest fact that the city of Washington will increase with the government of the United States, which is simply in its early manhood as a nation, there can be no sort of question that the time is immediately before us when the population of the city of Washington will oc-cupy the entire District of Columbia."

The dangers of overhead wires were then discussed at some length.

Senstor Stewart offered a substitute for section 4 of the committee bill. It required the District Commissioners to conduct the condem-nation operations and directed them "to furnish the money necessary to pay for the purchase or condemnation of said lands and to compensate the owners therefor."

Senator Vest at once objected to the District being required to pay for the roadway to be District bar to the judges of the United States occupied by the company, and Senator Stewart and District Supreme Courts, the members of said he had offered the wrong amendment. He | the cabinet and District Commissioners was then produced another substitute, in which the given Saturday, notwithstanding the pouring corporation was ordered to pay the costs. The bill on objection and Senator Hale's demand for the yeas and nays went over.
